INTRODUCTION

John McHugh (1831-1892), a potter from Scotland, appears to have had his first business in The Quadrant where he produced domestic ware. In 1872 he moved to a leased site in South Launceston. Utilising the good natural clay deposits in the area, he concentrated on tile and pipe manufacture from 1873. His business, Tasmania Pipe and Pottery Works, Sandhill, flourished supplying product to the Launceston Corporation in alternate years. Agricultural pipe production also became a speciality to meet pastoral demands. After John McHugh's retirement in 1891, the business was continued by his sons and James Jackson under the name McHugh Brothers and Jackson (Tasmanian Steam Pipe, Tile and Pottery Works). In this period it employed a workforce of 13, and had agents in Hobart (Messrs W T Bates & Co) and on the North-West and West coasts. John McHugh's sons became sole proprietors after Jackson's death in 1900.

In December 1918, McHugh Brothers Pty Ltd was taken over by James Wright, James Gordon Duncan and William Grieve, and was incorporated on 20 March 1920. Between the First and Second World Wars fine ware was added to the range of products, but abandoned after the Second World War. Major customers in this period included the Electrolytic Zinc (EZ) Company and the Postmaster- General's Department, and McHugh Brothers Pty Ltd also had contracts to supply sewer pipes to Ballarat and Canberra (then in the early stages of its development as the national capital).

In 1960 McHugh Brothers Pty Ltd bought the Granton Brickworks and a second company, McHugh Brickworks Pty Ltd, was established. It was later sold by Humes Ltd to the Hobart Brick Company Pty Ltd. Humes Ltd had taken over McHugh Brothers Pty Ltd in late 1961, although it continued as a separately registered company until 1968. The pottery was demolished in the late 1970s.

The collection was donated to the Queen Victoria Museum and Art Gallery in June 1984 with an additional item donated in August 2003. Further items were added in 2008: these are listed as 8.Addendum
