INTRODUCTION

William Robert Rolph was born at Carrick on 26 March 1864, the son of Daniel, licensee of the Prince of Wales Hotel, and Henrietta Louisa (nee Ives) Rolph. He was educated in Launceston. After leaving school he worked for Douglas & Collins, solicitors, for about two years, followed by five years with Dalgety, Moore (later Du Croz, Smith) & Co. About 1886 he left Tasmania for mercantile employment in Brisbane, Townsville and Sydney.

An accomplished violinist, Mr Rolph subsequently travelled to England and the Continent with his sister Ada to continue his music studies, but eye trouble forced him to abandon his plans. Upon his return to Launceston in the early 1890s, he became chief clerk in the Railway Department, then entered into partnership with Edward Sheargold as mining agents and sharebrokers. Later Mr Rolph and Alex T Young practised as public accountants and trade trustees under the firm name Rolph and Young. A T Cruickshank subsequently joined the firm.

Mr Rolph and Mr Young became associated with the Launceston Examiner in November 1897. After Mr Young's retirement due to ill health in 1916 the firm became W R Rolph & Sons.

Under Mr Rolph's direction The Examiner published the Weekly Courier from 1901 to 1935, the Saturday Evening Express was commenced in 1924 and in 1938 the radio station 7EX was established. In 1908 he inaugurated The Examiner Empty Stocking Fund. Later an annual children's picnic was associated with this fund and attending the picnic was one of his greatest pleasures.

A caring man with wide interests, Mr Rolph was involved with an impressive number of organisations. He was chairman of the Tasmanian Permanent Executors' and Trustees' Association Ltd; director and past chairman of the Equitable Building Society; member of the Launceston Public Library Board; foundation member and past president of the Northern Branch of the Royal Society and a trustee of the Northern Home for Boys, Queen Victoria Hospital, Ministering Children's League Convalescent Home and Lyons Memorial Bursary Fund. He was a government nominee on the Launceston General Hospital Board, chairman of the Ramsay Memorial Library Fund, a member of the Launceston Commercial Travellers' Association and Returned Soldiers League clubs and first secretary pro tem of the Launceston Rotary Club. An early motoring enthusiast, he was a vice president of the Tasmanian Automobile Club, a member of the Northern Tourist Association and vice president of the Australian Provincial Press Association for a quarter of a century. He was a member of the 1929 Flood Relief Committee.

During the First World War he was instrumental in establishing many patriotic funds and was one of the original members of the Fathers' Association. His son, Robert Stewart, who joined the AIF in 1915, served overseas until early 1919.

Probably his greatest interest was music. A foundation member (1903) and a member of the first executive of the Launceston Literary and Musical Competitions Association, at the time of his death he was senior vice president, having been associated with the competitions for over 40 years. Vice president of four Launceston bands and a member of the advisory committee of the Australian Music Board examinations, he was a staunch supporter of all visiting artists.

In his youth a keen swimmer and boxer, Mr Rolph was closely identified with the "Learn to Swim" campaign, president of the Esk Lacrosse Club and enjoyed watching cricket and vigoro matches.

Deeply conscious of the responsibilities of the press, for nearly half a century he influenced The Examiner's policies and under his guidance the paper achieved a high standard in Australian journalism. A patriotic Launceston citizen, he did much to promote industrial and other developments in the north of the state.

While in London, on 30 January 1892 he married London born Emily Jane Bickell. Their six children were born in Launceston: Gordon (1893-1959), Robert Stewart (1894-1965), Dorice Alice, later Mrs S B Stewart (1897-1930), Mavis Emily (1898-1958), Trevor William (1901-1923) and William Henry (1905-). Mrs Rolph died on 16 November 1936.

After an illness lasting almost four years, W R Rolph died at his home 'Strathairlie', 52 Elphin Road, on 23 January 1948, survived by three sons and a daughter. His funeral service was held at the Frederick Street Christ Church (Congregational) where he had been a regular attendant.

The collection was donated to the Queen Victoria Museum and Art Gallery in 1998 and 2007.
