INTRODUCTION

Peters Ice Cream (Vic.), which commenced operations in Melbourne in 1929, began distributing its products in Tasmania in 1932. Distribution was undertaken by Johnstone & Wilmot Pty Ltd until 1947, when Peters' York Street premises took over. Later the York Street building became Peters frozen foods store. Airfreight from Victoria replaced sea transport in 1949.

Peters Ice Cream (Tas.) Pty Ltd, a subsidiary company of Peters Ice Cream (Vic.), was established in 1954 to conduct Peters operations in Tasmania. The company built a factory on a 12 acre site at 89-99 Talbot Road, Launceston (previously an apple orchard) and on 11 July 1955 the factory made its first ice cream in Tasmania. Full production began in June 1956. Several houses were built on the property for key staff. Set in landscaped grounds, the factory became a popular tourist attraction.

In Peters Ice Cream (Vic.) Ltd 1962 annual report it was noted that the manufacture and distribution of crumpets had started on an experimental basis in Launceston as an added line for winter months. That year Peters Ice Cream (Tas.) acquired the Tasmanian Ice Cream Co. Pty Ltd.

By 1964 Peters Ice Cream (Tas.) had depots in Hobart, Devonport, Burnie, Ulverstone, Queenstown and St Marys. In addition to making ice cream, the company marketed products from the northwest coast under the Birdseye, Farmer Ed and Hy. Peak labels, made crumpets during the winter months and marketed refrigerators, water coolers and air conditioners manufactured by Peters' South Australian and Victorian companies. In 1964 Peters Ice Cream (Vic.) changed its name to Petersville Australia Ltd.

After distributing meat pies for two years, in 1966 the Launceston factory began making Four'n Twenty pies. The following year the factory commenced making a range of pastry goods, continuing to make puff and short pastry after pie production ceased. At this time Peters Ice Cream (Tas.) Pty Ltd was also manufacturing refrigeration equipment, including refrigerated containers used on Tasmanian railways, and supplying and installing commercial refrigeration systems.

In 1972 60 varieties of ice cream in different flavors and shapes were being manufactured in the Launceston factory, which employed 130 people and was one of the biggest buyers of Tasmanian milk and butterfat.

Australian United Foods, an amalgamation of the ice cream divisions of Petersville Australia Ltd and QUF Industries Ltd, was formed in 1980. Peters and Pauls brands continued to compete, but rationalisation saw 80% of Pauls products coming from the Launceston factory instead of Victoria.

The Launceston factory was upgraded in 1984 when a new refrigerated warehouse was opened.

In 1988 Australian United Foods was owned equally by Petersville Sleigh Ltd and Tooth & Co. Ltd, both companies associated with the Adelaide Steamship Group.

When Peters Foods, then a division of Pacific Dunlop Ltd, closed its Launceston ice cream plant on 30 July 1993, 30 people were employed at the factory and another 30 employed throughout the State in sales and distribution. Peters Foods said the plant had become uneconomic. Allfood Distribution was to take over the distribution of Peters Food products in Tasmania and was negotiating to buy the Launceston site.

The collection was donated to the Queen Victoria Museum and Art Gallery in July 1993.
